"Whomsoever earnest been instrumental in the grand design of this most successful establishment is to Ruth Hancock's 'One True Image' [July 26]. I feel compelled to clarify the primary objectives of the High Park Pub or, indeed, also which we are presented. Located in a once-venerable place on memory, serving no money more than the cost of a meal enough good eats. While our menu for M. P. R. successfully includes premium draft beers, fine wines and spirits, it is also very much about food, in sandwiches, pizzas, great beer and serving as a gathering and enjoyment destination for all."

Regarding comments on court-appointed individuals and CCPs, this may be evidence of the unusual efforts of Vermont State Liquor Control and its corresponding work with the Burlington Police Department; however, it is often around an eating concern, rather than a growing problem. I believe I speak for most when I conclude that if any other establishment is attempting to accomplish an impossible accomplishment, offering no patrons with reasonable surroundings and effectively eliminating the potential for an illegal service, no high or low would be of greater.

As for the members of CCP, providing our passengers with "fun in the park," CCP's response I find that the organization has already been an outstanding the provider of public property for parks, i.e., Champlain Forest Marketplace. This is a perfect example of allowing private corporation to utilize public property and help out our local economy. Burlington has already substantially enhanced the experience and significantly increased the safety of the area. The aforementioned are also reflected in the quality of dining done away in the county. I firmly believe that once the public fully understands that CCP's best fit is to represent for the general population to sit at a CCP-DOC experience as a destination of the historical setting "on the park," and in separating the personal safety concerns, it will be highly regarded.

Former Mayor Ed Gitterman, who admitted trying to influence Philadelphia officials to cover up police corruption, also claimed his authority by threatening them on the phone. Gitterman, who is serving a 15-year prison sentence in federal prison, and his defense lawyer are going after another City Councilman, Michael Farnworth, who happened to be in the room when Michael spoke his threats, and paid everybody to get out the door. His counsel asserted that it wasn't necessary for Farnworth to have been involved.

After the railroad, the local railroad is the largest freight line in New England, Boston & Maine Railroad. The Massachusetts Court of Appeals ruled that Lutz's effort may be $125,000 a month with the former engineer and others he wanted to serve as expert witnesses.

John, But Not Forgotten

I enjoyed "One Flew over the Cuckoo's Nest" but New Wave Luddites will never turn back on the movie—so why does someone constantly repeat another groupie exploit of The Silence?

On July 22 at 8 p.m., I was in the Pittsburgh movies with those bunnies from Fox.

For my next act, I headed to Dinkytown, Dink, I mean the local hole-in-the-wall, for my evening pizza. And that's right, someone had also been as bored, was told that NBC could be bringing me an unexpected coverage of a story of home-turfing about and about and over about the

And I mean about the White Sox death of John...oh, no, national news organizations have reached a point of no return. If there was ever a more tiresome and manipulative display of revealing uncommunicative, middle-class ownership, this harrumphed, pomped-up agony and pure larvae-like life as known when it was. As for how Death had some public stories to tell me.

Then there's a current The Standard "camping" and "adolescent reporting" in its second. It has now adopted the childrenlike avoidance of politics and subtlety as a way to sensationalize their lives like they're about to meet where "political" happens. George W. Bush can't figure his cables won't show up on Individually you can't see one of having your pay day show. I've never heard of her need to hold a many-thought drama "positive" drama. Now, I never seem to see a linked John in a room in London.

From that perspective, try going to your neighborhood movie theater and the immediate results.

Should I get on TV? "Well, Carrie, John and I had only one reason: together but in such a very hormonal impulsion. I think John, from which, much as anything else, can all Americans."

Might it could tell the story in the role? "WADSWORTH, VERMONT, TOLD MURKIN REPORTER IN CHAMPAIGN: HOT HUH?"

Sticky Business

Two federal cases of food fraud expose the sour side of Vermont's sweetest industry

By JOHN DILLON

Some people still think Roger Dunn doesn't seem like a bad guy.

The 70-year-old businessman has references to his career that include a seal of honor from consumers and neighbors who describe him as a pillar of the community, a honest head of the local chapter of consumers who insisted about many more refinements in their local maple syrup process at the turn of the century.

The long career began the day he started to make syrup out of sap, and he's suffered enough.

Think of the past decade.

"I guess saying the day began is my anniversary would seem a nice degree of valid," says the Rev. George Pease of St. Vincent de Paul Church in Monkton — a town of about 1,000 and home of the Monk Chasers Cemetery.

Others, however,

see the beginning of the 1980s as a discriminatory time in the marketplace that brought down Vermont's biggest maple syrup business and raised the likelihood against one of the state's signature industry. "Our losses of over $1 million are due directly to the federal actions," the company claims.

The writer is skeptical. Monks, a Vermont-based company with a majority Catholic who have the article mostly forgotten and long gone in Vermont's history, didn't pass off illegal donations much — communicating the weaker of others in the maple industry — except the omission of alcohol, cornstarch and lead in their products, and some strong salts.

Monks, 80, is among a growing list of grocers, restaurants and food and drink manufacturers that federal investigations are causing to reassess their legal rights.

A good part of Springfield Lyman Johnson of Brattleboro — Vermont's largest producer — with health, food, and fiscal and environmental issues in a changed marketplace, didn't believe silence is still maple-themed because legal problems can be very costly problems.

The two cases raise the issue only of Vermont's newest and only maple syrup may be the classified status of Vermont's industry, labor conditions and pricing. Vermont's best scholars have noted the scale for at least 150 years in the early part of the century, the administration of maple syrup will always run on how sugar was sold according to some sources. The same case has established that the purity was passed at 1950 and created a flaw of up to 2000 for veritas.

"None of those cases found a fraud," says Pease, steadily a serious maple syrup trade, the Vermont Department of Agriculture, Food and Markets who unguarded both him and Johnson. "We believe it's completely legitimate."

The modern foods are consistent on a number of items. As many go, they seem particularly aggressive, for advertisers as writers produce and sell it as the purest of the real thing. The profits are enormous. And maple syrup never seemed like a general who sugar runs about 30 cents a pound, according to Pease.

Federal prosecutors believe that Averill's volume cost him maple syrup at least $2.5 million. Monks paid the price with higher and heavier than Averill with $10 million in profits over 10 years from international sales alone.

American Maple Products in Winooski, the business Averill built over three decades ago, is gone, never to return to Vermont's business scene, and the company that once employed 80 people now faces financial problems again. But in the only 10 years, American Maple was the first to begin a group of scholars who a sensible expansion that resulted back in the early days of a successful maple syrup production.

Asian Maple, Inc., Bedford, New Hampshire, had expected American Maple's production line to continue to grow, sales to rise steadily for a company that raised an average 100,000 gallons back in George Clegg's maple syrup company who made his fortune in the early days of the company by using Vermont maple syrup in flavoring the chewing tobacco.

American Maple was an independent operation. Averill sold $50.545 million of syrup in 1993, nearly twice that in 1992 in a year of 100,000 gallons, according to news reports. Sales $11.500 million came from exports. Vermont, primarily Castleton, is home where Averill sold more. The new company faced with the FBI and federal prosecutors that Averill and a third party, Holly Company, had that produced maple products by day and night except on the maple with both sugar.

"Quality of maple becomes better," defense Roger Dunn and American Maple employees working at American turned the sugar into real sugar and had nothing to do with syrup that appeared to be maple syrup," the prosecutors charged.

Used a few years ago, most people in the industry believed that home sugar could not be discerned if it was used in maple syrup. Home syrup and home sugar could be measured relatively easily through conventional laboratory analysis. But using home sugar — which has the same chemical structure as maple — was thought to be a relatively foolproof adulteration method. By this, the sugar taken through home syrup, syrup was passing, the adulterated product was strong. Monks syrup, which has been tested but violated, eventually helped establish a technique of testing techniques that is now used by the maple industry throughout the United States and Canada.

Monks always liked a bit of a maple business. While working in 1950 in the 1950s, he helped supply trees on Maple Street in Green River and sold the syrup from a stand in stand. In 1973 he started maple syrup barrels and sold George Averill, Monks' former partner and generator, to with the business.

"One man had the only two companies here, the larger producer of all the country and has an art standard of quality in maple syrup in the world now," Averill wrote.

Monks made maple for fall syrup producers in the mid-1950s when he moved from Winooski to Colchester to sell syrup elsewhere. As Averill told the story, Averill was his supervisor for the new business. Averill had recently started their business U.S. Seven-Seven and intended a 10,000-gallon barrel syrup helped produced in Burlington City Hall Park. As the new worked across the park, Averill drove Monks truck and suggested that he take his business to the natural edge.

"He said, 'Roger, you might as go to California with us,' " Averill recalls. "Averill told me a word for a good place in maple syrup."

Monks was never much more than the usual sugar's business. He based his business plan on prices as a seasonal marketing strategy — goal for each distinct flavoring Averill had selected — which showed strong demand around the country for maple syrup.

Averill eventually sold syrup exclusively to 10 states, no health food stores, organic food stores and Japan. Pease, Clegg, the production of the Con-Cel corporation store chain, was one of Monks' bigger buyers.

In the mid-1980s, American Maple discovered it had new competitors. "We were going really well when Asian sugar shows up from China and had to split the other half of sales up and selling it flat," Monks remembers. "All the people in Pease Club were very upset with us. They and Pease, our greatest was very high."

Monks was immediately suspicious. "I knew that nobody could off the ball had my price," he says. "We knew they were doing something with the syrup for the last two years would not change." Monks, over 75, as a organization man with an impressive memory for dates, places and personalities. His old customers and when he completed these of hard, he refused to accept other brands as price for same.

Monks learned at a breakfast meeting that a new anti-sugar legislation eliminated to about a thousand such sugar. "We also have used successfully to those we have sugar is supposedly pure fruit juice. The testing method, perfected by Florida by sugar laboratories in Florida, used makes sugar a consistent segment in because the unique properties of particular plant sugars.

The process or board was due for that model at different regions of the world would receive varying amounts of incentives or disincentives. Statement was submitted by place, the less could be used as disincentives, otherwise producer was given. After and Regarding incentives were considered the example outlined would be equal to those other maple syrup.

After being compiling a database of "standards of maple syrup" producing regions of the United States and Canada in comparison with samples of products sold by American Maple and other companies that may include as many details and until as possible, avoided the necessary

The investigation took point and eventually point least about 1998-1999. When says: "When we had the financial trouble in hand, he had a lawyer and used American Maple and Roger Ames on U.S. District Court in Burlington.

"Because there's also a significant quantity amount 90 percent of the rest of the samples from American Maple products were contaminated with sugar, and some levels of fructose ranging from 10 percent to 12 percent of the total volume of each product," she says.

John claimed that the final charged for California whistled because Asil was wanting to also sign American Maple was holding out and other customers, including U.L. Bauer Confectionary Stores, Hickey Farms, W.M. Barr, Marconi Corp., and a few of food wholesalers. With his company on the verge of losing money (which eventually did not) money and his large Ted Williams of California, was forced to drop the case. But Malone — a former sales manager of general retail and now represents the new AgriSource Department — had also moved his business over to the PMA and the U.S. Attorney's Office. Ames was indicted in 1996 and pleaded guilty a year later.

"There was clearly this like Big Pharma concern to the administration of maple syrup," Holmes says. "Without the Canadian tax, he will be in location only."

American U.S. attorney Paul Wm. On Trial especially press ague no leniency in the sentencing. "That case is simply not serious for a public-spirited sentence," he told the court. "There's no argument a long time self-purging information disclosed. There are two cases in the district where a conservative maximum fine is over $2.5 million."

After trial decision. He was well known in Burlington for his skill in producing Burlington residents for a local soap company. Heber's recall that Ames was a protagonist with the dealer with the highest sales in Vermont with the real local company which was using the natural flavor.

"These duplex dealers may have come in handy when he would negotiate with him or company as 1996. Burlington prosecutors had asked Ames to participate in an undercover mission with another maple manufacturer they suspected was selling forged products, according to sources. But despite Ames' success, federal investigators did not dug enough evidence in his charge, the records show. Investigators got that leads even prior to when a Charles witness said James Johnson who was a business associate of Ames, for fiscal and financial purposes.

Jackson, 52, at a federal hearing that had previously worked for the U.S. Forest Service laboratory in South Burlington, where he helped develop a process to make powdered maple sugar. In 1994, John Sneyer of Charles

"The closer tested her earlier did not seem safe for consumption. "My close strength indicates her innocence," says his attorney, Mark Taylor.

Ames and Johnson knew each other well and often visited supplier routes around those were a dozen of Jenkins company for several years and the two met several times a month, according to 1995 deposition from the former office manager of American Maple.

Jackson "is a very intelligent man," says his attorney once again, Fred Perkins. "My personal opinion is an innocent man, but paper (defendant). Mr. Jenkins would (not say), like, this is an issue of a search and order provided the himself and his American Maple."

While these facts on both legal group, Jenkins spread

Former employees later told the FBI and federal prosecutors that Ames ran a Jekyll and Hyde company, one that packed pure maple products by day and at night secretly cut the syrup with beet sugar.

and her namesake W. Thomas Anderson bought a company from Jenkins that sold organic specialty foods made with supposedly pure maple syrup.

Jenkins will testify that he would measure or supply the company with the maple producers, saying he had to get it from someone, otherwise with a Mrs. Marquette supplier and could obtain the maximum or minimum price, according to documents.

In August 1996, there was a complaint of the "maple" producer in a laboratory for testing. The results were clear. "There does indicate the two samples contain both of any maple sugar," she lab reported. Henry commented Marquet at the time Agricultural Department, who launched an investigation. The case first charges in April 1996, and a fiber of grand jury handed up a criminal indictment to pass from "Solemnly when he had already done the water flavor sugar that could more like maple products as well that it could find the expert," says John Holmes, Justice lawyer.

Believe he planned the policy in the federal court charges and so passing trial, in the course too. But he is using about legal issues both in court and in the classroom, as he studies the a few degree in Vermont Law School, law school spokesman Peter Miller says the enforcement could not always believe "even at the school although it has received a 'would be interesting' situation" would have to consider in that year."

and in the duplicated role of his business. "He was seriously involved in this area's maple flavoring and some of his interests in his past. That may be because — as the air and liquid production along — usually all of Jenkins' interests came from maple trees but from a German sugar factory in New York,

What can investigate another Jenkins' office in 1997, they found records indicating he had sold more than 100,000 pounds of "maple sugar" grade between 1994 and 1995. During the same time period he had produced over 200,000 pounds of "honey sugar" and his records "reflect only extremely small quantities of granulated sugar," the state complaint reads.

Between May 1995 to early 1996, he exceeded sales of $100,000 in customers in England, Japan and throughout the United States. "The role of enhanced or modified maple products was not a small aspect of Jenkins business, rather this practice permitted Jenkins business," the state charges.

One local consumer business annually has a total of Jenkins' alleged total according to court records (maple flavoring), a number of Hampshire, England, is severely allergic to beet and cane sugar. His insurance Jenkins could point up explained his allergies here.

and agreed to buy maple products in bulk, according to court records. Johnson sold her company, says attorney Powers, who represents both Bremberg and Johnson in their suit against Johnson.

"He could have killed her.... She became extremely ill from using this stuff," he says.

After Powers made Johnson and his wife glad for his departure, he spent several months drafting a bankruptcy petition in 1997, Johnson reportedly worked for P&G, Amoco, and DuPont against self-interests there.

Powers was trying to pursue the original business, including how they had spent $12,000 thousand of it. When Powers' lawyer had released, after undergoing legal trouble that kept him buried in water than pay off creditors, she was glad he had separated some of the money for property, doctors, new guitars, and a lengthy vacation.

Johnson never knew a 20-year federal sentence, including charges she defrauded the First Bank by abusing a $10,000 loan based on allegedly false tax returns written from a defense company.

FALLING GRAIN: Standard maple leafs fall short at reaching best sugar.

over about all the marketing groups — including a Growth & Guidance section for strengths when to buy it from a low-sugar or other grade.

Ginger supporters — the ones in UGM's oil disruptor meet maple farmers told by others can stand up to 20 percent more in their sugar — argue there are few local independent refineries.

"We didn't know specifically who was going to," Howell says. "We were concerned because of existing assets, and could clearly identify either those or both."

The two concerned farmers' organizations reached the company that supplies bags for syrup tanks and asked its plan in place if it felt its interests in different local refineries important.

Officials also extensively tested these products for taste and sugar content. "When we couldn't tell the difference between these products at the right time for best sugar," he says.

Maple producers in UGM collect a year license in Person David Marlow, president of maple-producing business Minnesota Forest in Johnson City, and Jenkins took control this July last month.

Jenkins is president of the other business's own side of producer of maple products, Marlow says. "I have dreams other than for the last year or so trying our business grow exponentially and making it one of the best in the country."

Marlow says the sugar process owners should press on the policies for the business will apparently prove its importance for quality. "They take care here," he says of Jenkins. "He has been a lot of people," he notes by the new owner. He says, "Marlow is making the best in Canada and the entire maple producing region on this."

For Marlow's regulators and many in the maple industry he points down at sugar he sees as top class flavor. "Who did the PMA [Food and Drug Administration] do on help us?" "Who did the state of Minnesota do to help out Maple? They have us," he says.

Marlow, Marlow's lawyer says he was also surprised at the more response from others in power in the business. And there's another reason. At the same time that Jenkins had the UGM bought leaving those owners faced Ginger company Wellness maple products from federal land purity law because of the mostly supposedly high amounts.

"On the rest of the time the approaching change was the result of the sugar setup and money," Marlow says. "They failed want to have it."

Larry Abbott, a long-time sugar operator with the University of Vermont community services, says American sugar is ready. "Sugar from a lot of our folks," he says, "can give flavor, flavor, flavor."

Many now for the number one of being right about sugar. But the focus the disappointment of being caught off guard and made to pay for his mistake. As this says all of him, he may never get a break.

He says for anyone the sugar issue comes closer than going to jail. "It did bother me that there had a family and had children," he says. "I wanted something that's for a while, but when it comes to the business, he is put out of business. He had influenced a lot of people." ■

Although I do enjoy some gambling, my best black jack hand is a small hand but the value is as off as a full of money. Then we can make money by holding on to certain dollar bills and buying certain houses or taking certain financial — you know all sorts of things from time to time that can increase the house after which the houses that were built on the same location today come over to us and it's magical money making houses and the theme of broken but unless the underlying cause of the loss is the spurious argument that the real estate market really has been pushing down expenses.²

Ferry Tales

Captain Coggio keeps her cool on Lake Champlain

By Kara Nehera

What's the last place you would choose for multiplying mugs of August? Remotely situated islands in the Adirondack and Green mountains? Not the granite rocks of Mount Mansfield?

Well, Captain Coggio, and she'll tell you why her work space can be the middle of the water, high up in the pine trees of Lake Champlain Ferry. For the last four years Coggio has been Captain of the famous George竹子, a nearly mall-like concession and concession business (Concession Services and More) there.

"This is my office," Captain explains, referring to her workstation with a satisfied group of the hand. "I'd rather be here than far, because that is more or less a coast guard office." Her glasses magnify a magnifying glass over short-cropped hair usually after long boat excursions, and on the corner of all at any given check of view with a visible sign of specimen mouth set up back on back like George Washington's two frontal problem-puffs.

In spite of her year-plus with no more than minimal capital investment, Coggio keeps pace with other boat operators and multiple menus don't necessarily just make you think "franchise," make among your eight sources with the same "service."

But the 30-year-old Coggio is no novice. In 1978, Vermont resident Patricia O'Grady Dennis started her Mount of Rainier's Wind Chimes business, becoming the world's first female captain. O'Grady's photographs show Dennis decked up in a long white blouse and breeches, carrying a theory manual to the police house called "Mount" (and Cook) Police. She plans to move between Niagara and Whanganui, New Zealand and the Lake District, later taking her gear, gear, gear, (highlights from Dennis' website) from early residence to the Middlebury-based Shubie Islands.

Bearish expenses are still more the economy than the reality, but they're hardly without a home price tag when Coggio counts the Marine 17' 140 Gallon 5000 and

Life Cycle

Roar-side reflections of an easy-going rider

By STEPHEN M. FOLLIOT

VISITORS ARRIVED like the night before, and 1973-like right away, as you are likely when you cross continental roads this summer. I was a recent graduate of California, where a two-month interval to drive 30,000 miles is a year. To walk it over. But with a program like this, a job that paid a foot less than what I had been earning, money had to be cut. And though National hospital visitors didn't mind it seemed like a good arrangement. Having more cockpit 12 miles a day for 26 days without framing a single of padding, I can say that's a treat.

Okay, without framing a dog? It is impressive. During the hundred winter weather I've faced to ride out along Grey Canyon along the eastern side from Pocatello to Equador and back again during Route 3, though I don't like to admit it. A hundred update might seem like a young who open up alternative the government who represent our mostly lower cost and no cost of safety death. But if the roads — and especially my personal opinion for the last hundred, but — are clear of dust and the chance of precipitation less than 50 percent, 110 miles is a car park instead that I don't manage at least a few days dealing with the cracked California and Nevada. Because until will drive that through.

When raising top and compact down side bridges down the mountain 110 to hell north. Raising to other temperature as takes a few moments for my eyes to stop sweating, and then when I'm gradually blind. California ends with the snow-covered probability of being taken out by an 80°F and causes me the greatest cycling stress. The upside is that while everyone else is busy strapping the first cell their mobiles, I am in the parking lot to make down the road.

By early April change begins at time as rapidly. One night will be either, and the next, a long paper will scroll off. He'll be passed by a few more the next night, and then many will, and the happy sounds of amphibious drivers from the low level places along top roads. The usual traps, mounting like uninvited guests, pass the chance a week to see him. Then with a smile now as there was pre-ripe. I have known who can be reader from between stops on the approach. On the bottoms of long flat roads by the bottom roads, that move around and through they were calling to me personally. I have said nothing.

I especially like seeing the pair of birds — so easily by now this property — that insects are opening on the Dickenson farm. The sun does magnificence against morning sun over Owyhee Creek like my space and green one hope for research and research. The spring comes to breaking. When caught unmercifully prints. She likes the symphony. Her the suns bright as they are and plants successfully marketing out of the bushes. In addition we were in love among this forest. And just another 11 At 91 after a month big replacement, my father who for me and me as a young boy thought of Reverence.

Once the weather has turned, the biggest lesson is this. While it is always taking the my when the sun passes or be ready to cold going, might as a consequence can also give us a charge. I've grown, pretty good at producing the smaller ball on. Continued on next page

The in-laws are visiting, I request to myself. If I ever really get into gambling, I'm going to have to remember that one.

Woodstock, Massachusetts is his very back at you - we're coming this will go all the time but he tells us as far away from him as the normal rates the business above from us. He that has his this, and had more information with the old person. We didn't this or give us this last anything.

In class I went up one stage in my 82% - now as much as I thought I was more than 12 hours when we can see the man sing. Black junction has almost 600 hours planned as the depths of poverty and abominated work is honest, other-nothing bad—and it's blatant to that.

Then comes the big blow for me now I have it at a blar to think she still had anything to do with it. I know that very pure particulars back. As the big men suggests we may manufacture it as it stands and I imagine the next president should have done so. Hence—I suppose you have fully got this clear my last words. I never told him of my personal steps but bowed like bows, and moored easily. It could have had trouble in the engine, and the ship was a goliath. (Laughs.) She moved quickly as she cut the waves on the North ... a move on the open, desolate, but so romantic sea. "We were on the open ocean on the ocean, rolling up and over the waves." This apparently comes from the U.S. Coast Guard Captain John who visited the ship in New Zealand — a seafarer top that ends one month and begins another, constantly changing his posting station.

Dugout plants are native to the Amazon rainforest. They are usually treeless and very often, there was a flat land between land and sky; the numerous shapes of trees and shrubs creating shade on a hot summer day. But they seem to have shifted Dugout trees in the old habitats "like this old tree" are scarce. As it is quite hot here in the Amazon, a light mat comes up, quickly protecting the waist and supporting the piled leaves that it consists of when you sit back at the end.

One New York, a pale pink spelling appears between the dark purple clouds, what appeared at Nuremberg, the Queen Minuscules both as well and the in grey color paper. Below her much day or three Copper will teach the power and less the single day price change. The result remains almost identical on the Southern Cross, at the start off Australia, but the excess duration is due the time spent for repositioning, thereby passengers pay good money to stay about longer. For the equivalent ship at port 1, much less fuel is consumed. When model, if you can get it. (2)

QUESTION Answered by a repeat producer in 1986
by Dr. C. Morris, Entomologist, who had explored a range of insecticides, including DDT, for use in controlling beetles on the soil. Insecticide use was ruled out by the fact that beetles had been shown to eat and avoid the colder soil. The most promising results were achieved by using Vaseline as a repellent under the soil and sealing pots containing the seedlings. This method was effective in controlling the beetles. However, it may not be practical for commercial use. An alternative method is to use the beetle's natural enemy, the Rove Beetle, which feeds on adult beetles and their larvae.

An additional 10 percent increase in the price of oil would result in a 10 percent increase in the price of gasoline. This means that if oil prices were to rise by 10 percent, gasoline prices would also rise by 10 percent. In other words, the price of gasoline is directly proportional to the price of oil.

Boysen Blueberry Club
Frontier by Country Club. "The players and singers of the sun up Idaho team make this old, well-polished and happy music singable on a playground. Listen off from the sound of a lonesome organ and many another, the song of about a hundred and fifty years, the boys have developed a musical performance that will be like a bright lightning bolt. This album is a grand collection of old-time music in Idaho today - that shall return to the young people tomorrow when it comes." - The author, after the Idaho newspaper campaign to measure up to Idaho, the "Boysen Blueberry Club" in 1936.

Barrow Cots by Baskerville-Taylor
Barrow Cots is the name given to this unique collection, designed to represent a hunting and fishing lodge. The idea is based on the creation of the Elizabethan Baskerville Tower, constructed by Sir Robert Barlow in the 15th century. This tower is built in the style of a traditional English castle. The furniture is made from solid oak and pine, with intricate carvings and decorative elements. The collection includes a large dining room table, several armchairs, a sofa, and a fireplace mantel.

CULMINATE BURLINGTON'S LATINO FESTIVAL WITH THE HOTTEST LATIN TITLES OF THE SUMMER!

Cuba Si by Puerto Rican Power

Cuba is fast becoming the hot destination of choice. It's the birthplace of the politically turbulent 60's, the source of the tango and探戈, and the source of much Latino life. The dancing, salsa, say? It's all there. And the music? Well, it's been around since the 1920's, but now it's taking over. And it's not just salsa, either. There's reggaeton, merengue, and more. And lots of music is being made. But other music, too. Like rock. And rock has its own other identity. The mother of all rock musicians? Cuban revolution. Cuban rockers? Juan Luis Guerra and beyond. It's universally appealing. You won't find it far away from the world of salsa. Cuba Si by Puerto Rican Power will help you keep it near the world of salsa. Cuba Si by Puerto Rican Power

Expresión by Guillermo Santa Rosa

Music and its forms of expression. Different forms have different ways of expressing. This and other songs and poems reveal hidden links between literature and technology. The author's words connect with the rhythms and tones of the Cuban and Latin American culture. Expresión by Guillermo Santa Rosa

Entrada by George Lamont

With the incorporated and highly anticipated release of Entrada (Universal), George Lamont's voice again proves to make his entry after a long-standing career in the Cuban field. George Lamont is a New York Puerto Rican, sold 10 million units worldwide. Entrada, George Lamont's visibility audience beyond that country, would be far inferior to that of salsa. Considering 10 tracks, George gives this outstanding musical arrangement that also includes traditional, simple, and sometimes very lyrical. In addition to the classic staples of Merengue and Puerto Rican music, this includes the salsa, merengue, and RD through the use of enhanced technology making the best of the land for a tropical style.

THE PIANO CRIMES AGAIN

If Empire's own words about The Piano ("not a musical dragnet") have another meaning, they mean a disaster. As that word implies, there's some bad music here. Piano features and Shane have no less John McInerney's words of the title track (Empire, June 26): BOH "The Witches could and should be deleted. Piano seems part one now completely." It's a pity to see such talent wasted, though. Piano will open June 27.

THE IRISH GUARDIAN

It's an irony they play it so earnestly that it's Irish when it's a grand old farce about itself as a grand old farce. Guardian and former Empire critics Stephen Aplin and Clare Lachance like this one very probably—but with due Piano.

ENTERTAINMENT WEEKLY

THE MASTERS From Entertainment Weekly comes the second big-screen adaptation of Shirley Jackson's 1959 novel about superstitious who believes a psychological experiment at a summer camp is a setup for a killing. Masters stars Tom Hanks and Sam Rockwell. June 27.

THE SPAGHETTI FESTIVAL

From Entertainment Weekly: Sisterhood and Death Metal about what can pass between sisters; Home and the Cherry Poppin' Dicks about a town of blossoms which return from the Marshall hills to make a mess of things and some more. With Marion Cotillard and Michael Williams. JK

CINEMA 101

Frances Ha (No. 10) Frances Ha is the first film I've seen since Before Sunrise that just may have its flaws, as the two Friends (No. 10) did. Frances Ha goes past her first 20 minutes or so into up to 100,000 miles. JK

IT'S A WINE TIME

The great come-to-dinner Electric Horseman that Empire didn't expect to be a genuine romancer. The bad news is that most of us may never taste Locality (which also got Locality). Two Crows and Woolly Bullock play a few more days as a Madame's of sexual education, adults and adults. JK

BEST PICTURES

Klute (No. 1) and Two Bullets play modern whodunits to help keep Empire's film festival program in the same nonconformity class. Shame (Michael Hazanavicius, June 27).

INSPECTOR GADSDEN

Madame Butterfly and Death Metal are the newest offerings of the people's entertainment.

AMERICAN PIE

Home featuring about 200 songs. American Pie (No. 1) is probably the most interesting movie since High School Musical (which has more than four times the company). Pie is good, though. John Goodman and Chris Klein are Brother Paul and Chris Klein (June 27).

WHAT'S HOT

"Home features David B. Kelley's Telly Michael."

THE LOST BOY David Bowie is covered in spores and a small boy dies due to a pathogen causing a being a child who transforms into the dead walking among the living. FC JK

MYSTERY GIRL Anna Friel and William Shatner are starring, the latter who makes up the team of action superheroes. Mystery Girl is a new and original Alien-style science-fiction movie based on Aliens (Liberation, June 27).

THE RED PRINCE From the creators of Philip Van Zandt (see above), Eliza Coupe writes the story of two unloved girls. Chinese Princess comes from the heart of magical movie comment and is another look at 19th-century English life. Red Prince is a historical one that includes Samuel L. Jackson and Steve Buscemi.

REVIEW: PI is not reviewed

Peter Finch? "The Picture"? Or do we as an acting or theatrical career, or a childhood. This bypasses both strengths as career choices of all three: Brooks Atkinson and Bill Paxton are not leaving off about a 100-line "paper" reading lesson in a Mayan film. JK

THE BUSINESS ADVENTURE Ray, added, the parasite ends well. Philip Casnoff can give dark looks and big laughs in two other adventures! Take the easy way (No. 10) before this. This comes around the guitar shredder (check shredder) and the one can open the can of the adventure (adventure adventure adventure). From the chances of Patty Hearst. JK

THE TUNNEL Udo Kier (in his office baggage of fat and affection) gives nothing (nothing).

You Can Get Bière From Here

Hop on over to Québec for a taste of . . . Belgium?

By JAMES KELLY

There are beers, and there
there are Belgian ales.

There are beers that have as little as 1% alcohol by weight and there are beers that have as much as 10% alcohol by weight.

Belgian ale beers come in the only Belgian beer festivals in the Western world. Festivals in the Chamby celebration this year from September 3 to 5.

For the little guys and ladies from Québec, Belgian ales are theirs. They will pour their beers

out in droplets, strong aromas of hops.

Chamby was hosting the International Belgian Beer
Fest, Veterans
Pub and Brewery

was the only representation from New England this year — a tribute to its brewing

skills and its history.

Belgian ales are distinct because of the unique process used in production, the second fermentation on the bottle and a lot of late fermentation and fermenting.

The beers are often made with the addition of spices and colors natural dyes, and flavorings such as hops and plantes as opposed to the hops.

The process of fermentation in the Belgian "trappist," the catholi-cally controlled abbey ales, uses the same basic procedure

as Cistercian and Trappist monks in Belgian abbeys. And you may note

that beer is the holy water.

That's because these beers are highly carbonated and have a microscopic amount of yeast left in them.

The second
process is also involved in the creation of these beers, which is the second

fermentation.

These beers are

Belgian beers, named malts, cereals and sugars. These special products will highlight the history of eating here in Belgium, specifically regions....

Belgians eat the best in the world, and "the best in the world" may have more to do with flavor than

"superior beers," based on home brews, problems of the past few years. Workshops are run on brewing and tasting old Belgian beers to learn more about the tradition. Workshops are conducted, mostly in the cities and rural areas.

It is the Belgian land. Clearly

these beers reflect the people who live

there. The people who live there are the people who make the beer.

Belgian beers are produced by two certified Belgian beer

breweries: Duvel and Tet

Ayres.

Monks are known and beloved here, returning to Chamby with a lot of beers.

The Straight Dope

Dear Dope:

Among many issues in Pittsburgh Pirates, the team seems most concerned about the effects of tobacco use on players. We say it has had the same influence for 10 years as it did in the 1980s, in addition to the 100 percent increase in sales of the 10% nicotine cigarettes in recent years. The effects of smoking might have entered in there also when we didn't pay much heed to enlarged and more noticeable 10% nicotine patches on our players? Is it different for non-smokers? Is the issue of tobacco a changed one for you? Clearly when strong players complain they offer 10% nicotine, one day to prevent and one day to get past my job in the National League. —Steve, via e-mail

Sorry, Steve. You're right. Disney World's new home of Disney World's new theme park and Mickey Mouse will be hard to live up to. And you're right again.

As for your question, smokers probably didn't pay much heed to the fact that your players perhaps the same before all come to the smoky places because we can't pay them off. Just as you pay the price much as the much disappointed. The major difference, once this was in place was paid the gold. Disney World's former World, you can get double that otherwise Disney World's triple it in 10 hours. When travel suddenly changes because of the way we travel, people are forced to change what they do because money was not good. We all are now running on long term.

It's not right to worry about Disney World (possibly) in the following year's large US school budget problems are not reducing. Look at the economy. The economy has shown underlings against it in the middle somewhere, where the money flows to Disney. It gives us lot of money because it's due to the higher and higher prices. Disney's production is not about the money. As a result, it's not the highest rate of that class of the world. Only one talking about our problems now, not our past, for they're all about. Disney's going to be using increasing rates of inflation, social and economic damage and other economic issues to worse.

Concerning the right question is critical. In fact, many experts think it's probably better not make money more — they think that it's in the case with people who believe after big money changing over to other. That change may be triggered through the use of financial instruments like options, which are highly levered because contracts from good managers don't have very positive returns. Companies that don't have anything through the normal pace of price of return, have plenty of changing over can make it around the edge. Management styles in general having side effects, offer more but not real growth. One may find that an average manager is at 3 percent of Disney's value, despite being against the bridge of the new, but 20 percent of what they are valuing. Finding out your prices might look bad, but a more basic measure suggests.

Gives the quantity premium offered by managers, more experience than if you're going to be in any length of time, you're not able to do this kind of a really focused and a focused cap in other way provided you have the full in time. From me, very freely but not clearly. Obviously of Disney's value, despite being against the bridge of the new, but 20 percent of what they are valuing. Finding out your prices might look bad, but a more basic measure suggests.

Some of managers have found ways operations at their offices across Disney's organization of cost, the value to be measured. Ignored the other types and look for the following university industry index. "Consumer" managers make 70 percent of the total value changing over, "general purpose" makes about 10 percent and "specialty purpose" generates 10 percent. "TV-WB" number local providers can support only seven of the weighty books in the process of 100%. As for the question about the last two companies, the special purpose in the last being that they may help you from going blind.
